

Rich Lepper, of Lepper Construction, along with J-Corp, Go Serve Global, churches and individuals from around Iowa and many other local business partners are coming together to totally renovate the property.

This home will serve as a second phase transitional living center for survivors in the first phase program of Wings of Refuge. Survivors will graduate from the restoration home and have the opportunity to practice independence in love, community, and with accountability and mentoring from Wings of Refuge staff and volunteers here.

It is anticipated that the new facility will be completed right before the holidays which will give prospective participants an opportunity to help furnish the home and prepare it for opening in early 2021. "We are so thankful that our faith-based program will continue to set women free and provide a place of healing and restoration. This shows the great love of God working in the hearts and souls of many across our state." stated Joy Fopma, founder. For more information contact Joy at wingsofrefuge.ia@gmail.com.
